2013 EMPLOYEE OF THE YEAR AWARD

Chancellor’s Exempt Staff Award

The Office of Equity and Diversity in conjunction with the Chancellor’s Office and the Chancellor’s Exempt Staff Award Selection Committee present the Fifth Annual Chancellor’s Exempt Staff Award. The Chancellor’s Exempt Staff Award evolved during the UT Family Campaign in 2007. This award was created to recognize one deserving non-faculty exempt employee who has demonstrated outstanding service and/or who has made a significant contribution to the university community beyond that normally expected for his/her position. The awardee will receive a plaque and a $1500 award.

Nomination Process:
The nomination form and any other pertinent information relative to this award can be found at: http://uthsc.edu/oed/exemptstaff.php.
National Women’s Health Week is a week-long health observance coordinated by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services’ Office on Women’s Health. It brings together communities, businesses, government, health organizations, and other groups in an effort to promote women’s health.

As we celebrate Women’s Health, it is encouraged that women take the following steps to improve their physical and mental health:

- Visit a health care professional to receive regular checkups and preventive screenings
- Get active
- Eat healthy
- Pay attention to mental health, including getting enough sleep and managing stress.
- Avoid unhealthy behaviors, such as smoking, not wearing seatbelt or bicycle helmet, and texting while driving.

Some disabilities are not obvious. In fact, “hidden disabilities” are common and can affect one’s work or academic life. A hidden disability can be any impairment causing limitations that are not easily discerned by others, and are not noticeable in one’s speech, behavior or mobility. Hidden disabilities occur in many forms. The following is a non-exhaustive of some hidden disabilities:

- Anxiety Disorders
- Arthritis
- Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD)
- Attention Deficit-Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD)
- Autism Spectrum Disorders
- Bipolar Disorder
- Brain Injury
- Cancer
- Chronic Fatigue Syndrome
- Chronic Pain
- Depression
- Diabetes
- Epilepsy
- Fibromyalgia
- Learning Disabilities
- Lupus
- Migraine Headaches
- Multiple Sclerosis
- Post-traumatic Stress Disorder
- Respiratory Disorders
- Sleep Disorders

There are several myths surrounding hidden disabilities. One myth is that hidden disabilities are not as severe as other disabilities such as mobility impairments. Another myth is that people with hidden disabilities do not need accommodations at work or school. Hidden disabilities can affect many different elements of one’s work and academic life. Under the Americans’ with Disabilities Act, the federal law that protects qualified disabled individuals from discrimination, disability is defined as a mental or physical impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities. For hidden disabilities, these major life activities could include: working, learning, thinking, speaking, concentrating, performing manual tasks, and interacting with others.

Qualified individuals with disabilities may obtain reasonable accommodations. Students seeking accommodations based on the impact of a disability should contact Student Academic Support Services. Please refer to the SASS webpage for information regarding the documentation guidelines and procedures for officially requesting services. If you are a UTHSC employee and have questions, concerns or would like to request a reasonable accommodation, please contact the Office of Equity and Diversity at (901) 448-2112.
COMMITMENT TO THE CODE

NOTE FROM THE DIRECTOR

On February 20, 2013, President Joe DiPietro sent an email message to all UT System employees announcing “The Revised UT Code of Conduct” that is accessible at www.tennessee.edu/code. President DiPietro advised a new code of conduct, applicable to University of Tennessee employees, had been revised for two purposes:

♦ To better facilitate a UT workplace culture that promotes responsible and ethical behavior
♦ To better facilitate University compliance with standards established by federal guidelines

In one portion of UT’s Code of Conduct (HR Policy 0580) there is a section that addresses there being an expectation that all employees be committed to creating an environment that promotes academic freedom, diversity, fair treatment, and respect for others. Specifically, the section titled ‘Respect for Others’ states the following:

“People are the University of Tennessee's most important resource for accomplishing its teaching, research, and public service missions. Accordingly, employees are expected to be committed to creating an environment that promotes academic freedom, diversity, fair treatment, and respect for others. Employees are expected to treat one another, students, and the general public in an honest and respectful manner.”

UT employees in management or leadership roles share responsibility for initiating and improving policies and practices that ensures UTHSC’s environment promotes diversity, fair treatment, and respect for others. More specifically, UT administrators (i.e., chancellors, vice chancellors, deans, associate/assistant deans, directors, managers, supervisors) facilitate the University’s effort in exercising reasonable care to prevent and correct promptly any harassing/inappropriate behavior. This shared responsibility is coupled with UTHSC’s EEO/AA non-discrimination statement that advises:

“The University of Tennessee is an EEO/AA/Title VI/Title IX/Section 504/ADA/ADEA institution in the provision of its education and employment programs and services.”

A comprehensive version of the EEO/AA non-discrimination statement can be found at http://www.uthsc.edu/oed/aa.php. The Code and non-discrimination statement prompts one simple question. How does a UTHSC employee demonstrate his/her commitment to creating an environment that promotes academic freedom, diversity, fair treatment, and respect for others? To some extent, this is an expectation outlined in an employee’s PDQ (Position Description Questionnaire) based on position title, why the position exist and measures of impact. Having some knowledge and understanding of academic freedom, diversity, fair treatment and respect for others is a great starting point for all employees to have an awareness as it relates to “Respect for Others”.

Lastly, a UT employee’s overall Commitment to the Code is demonstrated through what they say, what they do, and what they are willing to take responsibility for each day. This is critical when you consider an individual employee’s measure of impact as it relates to “The Revised Code of Conduct” in its entirety.

HOW TO ASK QUESTIONS THAT GET THE RESULTS YOU WANT:

The Monk’s Method

Two monks were praying, walking and talking as they do all day long. The junior monk said to the senior monk. “I’m surprised you’re allowed to smoke while walking around and praying here in the monastery my dear brother. When I joined the monastery, I too asked the Head Monk about smoking, but in a slightly different manner. I asked him: ‘Dear Master, Is it alright for me to pray while smoking?’ And he said, ‘But of course my son. You can pray anytime.’

In asking questions, as well as in all other aspects of communication, it’s not what you say that counts, but how you say it.

The Monk’s Method is one of the techniques covered in our "Critical Conversations" class offered by the Office of Equity and Diversity.
